Recognising and challenging stereotypes of visible difference
Today we will learn:

- What a visible difference is.
- How stereotypes of visible difference are often used in film and on TV.
- What impact negative stereotypes of visible difference can have on people.

Remember that when we discuss a topic:

• Only one person should talk at a time.
  – no interrupting.

• Show respect for the views of others.

• Challenge the ideas not the person.

• Use appropriate language – no rude comments.

• Allow everyone to express their view, to ensure that everyone is heard and respected.

• Don’t share personal stories without permission.

QUESTION TIME

What makes a film or TV villain scary?
All of the villains on the previous slide have an unusual appearance, such as a scar.

How many heroes can you think of who have a scar, mark or condition that affects their appearance?
It’s common for films and TV programmes to use the stereotype that if you look different, you must be a villain.

This has a negative impact on people who look different in real life.
A visible difference is a mark, scar or condition that affects the appearance of someone’s face or body.
Causes of a visible difference:

- Skin conditions like eczema, acne, or vitiligo
- Burns
- Birthmarks
- Craniofacial conditions, affecting the growth and development of the skull and face
- Cleft lip/palate (a gap or split in the upper lip and/or roof of the mouth)
- Cancer
There are many types of visible difference
